An office comedy

~ meets ~

gay rom-com

A much lighter – and raunchier – title than the average BL, Punch Drunk Love is an office romance that follows Seon-Woo's desperate attempts to get with Tae-Moon, who he accidentally discovers is also gay when he spots him on a dating app. Seon-Woo has the emotional intelligence of a cabbage, coupled with the blind enthusiasm of a golden retriever, and poor Tae-Moon has zero idea of how to handle him.

The subgenre here is “miscommunications,” and boy, does this story lean into it. Tae-Moon at first mistakes Seon-Woo's aggressive (and inept) flirting as blackmail, while Seon-Woo thinks that he has to pretend to be much more sexually experienced than he actually is in order to “woo” Tae-Moon.

A dramatic scene from a movie or TV show. Two men in dark blue suits are facing each other in a room with large windows. The man on the left has short dark hair and is shouting with his mouth wide open. The man on the right has a beard and is also shouting. They appear to be in a physical struggle, with their hands clasped together. The background shows a city skyline through the windows.

Poor Tae-Moon is so utterly confused by Seon-Woo's words and actions that he starts to assume some very odd things about Seon-Woo's family life and past...although as the plot progresses, we come to realize that he's basing it on his own difficult family life.

Even with this darker element, however, Punch Drunk Love is on the lighter side as a whole, a story about two emotional idiots screwing their way to love and understanding.
